

The Weekend Gameplan

Win Your Week By Not Losing Your Weekend

Welcome to your Weekend Gameplan. This is how you actually enjoy your life without feeling like you've derailed everything by Monday. Simple principles. Clear expectations. Zero guilt. Full control.

The Weekend Trap

Most people are brilliant Monday to Friday, then fall apart at the first sight of a beer garden or a takeaway menu. Your progress does not get ruined by one meal. It gets ruined by a full weekend of "ah screw it".

This gameplan stops that happening. You'll learn to navigate social situations, maintain momentum, and actually enjoy your weekends without the Sunday night guilt that comes with completely abandoning your goals.

The key is understanding that weekends are part of your lifestyle, not a break from it. When you treat them as exceptions, you create a cycle of restriction and rebellion that sabotages real progress.

The Weekend Targets

Hit these and you stay on track no matter what

Steps

Aim for 8,000 to 10,000 each day. Keep your body moving even when you're relaxing.

Protein

Two protein-focused meals minimum. This keeps you satisfied and supports your progress.

Hydration

Two litres of water daily. Proper hydration improves energy and decision-making.

Mindset

Make memories, not excuses. Enjoy yourself whilst staying aligned with your goals.

If you hit these four non-negotiables, you will feel great on Monday. These aren't restrictions—they're guardrails that give you freedom to enjoy your weekend within a framework that works.

Plan Your Food Before The Chaos Starts

01

Eat normally during the day

Don't "save calories" for later. This leads to overeating and poor choices when you're starving.

03

Have a balanced pre-going-out meal

Eat something substantial before social events. You'll drink less, choose better, and feel more in control.

02

Get your protein in early

A protein-rich breakfast sets you up for better decisions throughout the day.

04

Decide your drink strategy before you order the first one

Know your limit and stick to it. Having a plan removes the in-the-moment guesswork.

If you plan even a little, you remove 90 per cent of the stress. Most weekend "failures" happen because people wing it, then make reactive choices when tired, hungry, or surrounded by temptation.

Smart Drink Choices

You can have a social life without tanking your calories

Go for spirits with low-calorie mixers

Gin and slimline tonic, vodka with soda water and fresh lime. Simple swaps that save hundreds of calories.

Alternate drinks with water

One alcoholic drink, one water. You'll stay hydrated, pace yourself, and feel better the next day.

Slow down and be present

Don't neck drinks because everyone else is. Enjoy the conversation, not just the glass in your hand.

If you drink, do it with intention, not autopilot. The difference between a great night and a regrettable one often comes down to awareness, not abstinence.

The Weekend Activity Rule

Move your body. A morning walk. A gym session. A YouTube workout. This isn't punishment—this is momentum.

If you keep the body moving, the mind stays sharp and the choices stay aligned. Exercise isn't about burning off what you ate. It's about maintaining the identity of someone who takes care of themselves.

Even 20 minutes makes a difference. A Saturday morning walk clears your head. A quick workout reminds you who you are. Movement creates momentum, and momentum makes better decisions easier.

The Sunday Reset

Set Up Next Week Before It Starts

1

Food shop

Stock your fridge with protein, vegetables, and easy meal options. Remove the friction from healthy eating.

2

Plan your meals

Know what you're eating Monday to Friday. You don't need every detail, just a rough framework.

3

Plan your training days

Block out gym sessions or workout times in your calendar. What gets scheduled gets done.

4

Evening walk

Clear your head before the week begins. Reflect on the weekend, mentally prepare for Monday.

5

Hydration topped up

End Sunday well-hydrated. Start Monday ahead of the game, not playing catch-up.

Ten minutes to reset makes Monday feel clean, calm, and controlled. The Sunday Reset is the bridge between enjoying your weekend and owning your week. It's not about perfection—it's about preparation.

The Real Goal

Balance Over Perfection

You are not trying to be perfect

You are trying to be consistent. If you enjoy yourself and hit your non-negotiables, that is a win.

You do not undo five days of progress with one moment of being human. Your body doesn't work on a 48-hour cycle. One weekend of living your life does not erase a week of good choices.

Your Weekend Wins

- Own your choices without guilt
- Enjoy your weekend fully
- Hit your four targets
- Show up again on Monday

Balance is the real skill. Perfection is a myth that keeps you stuck. Consistency is what creates results. This gameplan gives you both freedom and structure—the exact combination you need to win your week by not losing your weekend.